

Angela Murray

MSN, RN

Project Director - Clinical
The Joint Commission

Angela Murray is currently a Project Director – Clinical in the Department of Standards and Survey Methods at The Joint Commission. In this role, she oversees work directly related to the creation of The Joint Commission standards and the survey methods as part of the standards development process. She is the co-chair of the emergency management committee and is actively involved in other projects. The Joint Commission accredits over 21,000 organizations across the entire continuum of health care and has many certifications for advanced care, all of which start in the Department of Standards and Survey Methods.

Prior to coming to The Joint Commission, Ms. Murray was the Trauma Coordinator at AMITA Health Alexian Brothers Hospital, Level II Trauma Center. She participated in local, regional, and state-wide initiatives to improve quality outcomes in trauma care. In addition, Ms. Murray held various leadership roles in the emergency department where she has spent most of her career. She provided education in trauma, cardiac, and other educational topics to pre-hospital providers (EMS) and ER staff and has served on many hospital wide committees. Ms. Murray also served as adjunct faculty at the University of St. Francis, Joliet, IL, where she instructed pre-licensure nursing students.

Ms. Murray has over 25 years of clinical nursing experience that includes emergency services, trauma quality, emergency management, and other clinical quality outcomes. Ms. Murray obtained her Master of Science in Nursing from Lewis University in Romeoville, IL and a Bachelor of Science in Nursing from Valparaiso University, Valparaiso, IN.
